Boat races returning to Haliburton

The village of Haliburton is sure to be buzzing when the Haliburton Power Boat Races come back to town for a second year Aug. 20 to 21.

The speed boat event, which includes hydro, T-boats and runabouts, will fill Head Lake with action starting on Saturday morning.

On Friday evening, Aug. 19, things get started with a meet and greet allowing boating enthusiasts and curious minds to get up close to see the powerful machines. You can meet the racers and their vessels on Friday at the government docks from 7 to 8 p.m.

Organizer Barb Hammond said the event is a financial boon to the town, bringing an exciting sport to the region and has a charitable aspect.

Local sponsors have come forward to help the event out including RPM and Youngdale Fuels and Hammond points out there have been many local businesses and institutions helping make the races happen.

More than 38 local businesses have sponsored the event in one way or another, she said.

New this year is a beer tent, which is being run by the hospital auxiliary with proceeds benefitting local health care. The Lions Club will be selling food, with 100 per cent of their sales going to that service club. Into the Blue Bakery will be making pizzas and donating $2 per pizza to the auxiliary. There will also be a raffle happening at the auxiliary tent.

"We're hoping to raise $5,000," Hammond said.

The event is free and spectators are reminded to come by the tent, which will be set-up in Head Lake Park near Rails End Gallery, to pick up a free program and get a goodie bag.

"Every spectator gets a copy of the program," says Hammond, noting the booklets have terminology and rules of boat racing, which will help understand the sport.

Hammond said she got involved in the races because her son races hydro boats. She explains that it is a family event with participants from as young as seven to as old as 75.

There will also be a special race for women who have never been in a race boat before.

The Haliburton Power Boat Races is a Canadian Boating Federation sanctioned event, which means it's professionally run. Last year, the federation awarded Haliburton the Best Race of 2015.

"It's pretty important for Haliburton to be recognized and put on the map," she said.

Spectators can check out the races in Haliburton on Saturday, Aug. 20 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday, Aug. 21 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. (Awards for Saturday will be given out Sunday morning at 10.)

10 reasons pirates avoid Haliburton

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

If you spend enough time on any of our 600 named lakes you'll eventually see every type of boat imaginable, but you won't see a pirate's ship. There are very good reasons why pirates steer clear of our waters. Here are 10:

1. Not enough boat launches. Sure, you could do OK flying the skull and crossbones and being the scourge of Loon Lake, but eventually you'd have to show up at the boat launch.
2. Drinking is illegal on the water and there isn't a pirate alive who is going to sing "Yo, ho, ho, and a bottle of Perrier!"
3. It's awful hard to board a jet ski.
4. Lake Kashagawigamog takes up too much room on a sea chart.
5. Have you tried to find buried treasure on the Canadian Shield?
6. Boater's cards.
7. Peg legs only sound tough until you hear about woodpeckers.
8. If you make someone walk the plank all the other kids will show up too.
9. There's nothing more annoying than a parrot who will only say, "How are you now?"
10. Tell a cottager you have corsairs and they'll recommend a good conditioner.

History vs. Hollywood

Erin's Editions

Erin Kernohan-Berning

I recently watched The Danish Girl starting Eddie Redmayne and Alicia Vikander. Based on a fiction book of the same name by David Ebershoff, the story is based on the real life Lili Elbe, a transgender woman who was one of the first identifiable people to undergo sex reassignment surgery in the early 1930s. Despite being critically acclaimed, the film has also been criticized for a number of reasons, including using a fictionalized account of Lili's life rather than relying on her posthumously published autobiography as source material.

As I was watching the film, and scrolling through what I could find about Lili Elbe online on my phone – some might see this as a horrible habit when viewing a movie, but it is one I enjoy from the comfort of my living room when I'm watching a film based on real people – I started to think about what happens when history and fiction cross paths.

In the historical drama Bridge of Spies starring Tom Hanks and Mark Rylance, we learn about the story of lawyer James B. Donovan and the prisoner exchange of Rudolph Abel for Frances Gary Powers in Berlin during the escalating tensions of the Cold War in 1962. Directed and co-produced by Steven Spielberg, the film is somewhat based on the book Strangers on a Bridge by James B. Donovan. Again, although the film was critically acclaimed, there were liberties taken with events to amp up the tension in what was otherwise a procedural legal drama.

For instance, in the film it shows Donovan witnessing the brutal shooting of civilians attempting to scale the Berlin Wall to escape from East to West Germany as he crossed over by train during the negotiations to free Powers and Pryor. However, Donovan never witnessed these shootings, although they did happen months after. While this portrayal of events wasn't strictly accurate, it did reflect the frightening things happening at the time.

There are some films that use real life characters and events in a fictionalized way, but don't even pretend to be based on a true story. This is definitely the case in the Joel and Ethan Coen film Hail, Caesar! Centring on the real life Hollywood fixer Eddie Mannix (played by Josh Brolin), the film both pays homage to and lampoons the tumultuous time in Hollywood when the studio system was in upheaval, the threat of Communism and McCarthyism loomed, and the order of the day for filmmaking was complete escapism.

While the events and most of the characters are completely fictional, with Mannix the only real name used, they are reflective of the time period, with many of the characters having an equivalent historical character – a Kirby Grant type character who plays singing cowboys, an Esther Williams type character who does aquatic musicals, a Gene Kelly type triple threat, and feuding gossip columnists the like of Hedda Hopper and Louella Parsons.

While historical fiction and non-fiction can both enlighten, when the two dance together they have the potential to either create something beautiful or stumble all over each other. In the case of Hail, Caesar! I felt immersed in the time period that the Coen brothers were illustrating, warts and all. In the case of Bridge of Spies, while the liberties were taken with the events of the time, it created a springboard to learn more about those events.

Going back to The Danish Girl, the waters are a little more muddied. While the film does respectfully portray a segment of our population that is under represented in media, the truncated timeline of Lili Elbe's life may do her a disservice. While it does a beautiful job of portraying Lili's self-discovery and transition in a world hostile to transgender people, she was certainly much more than the surgery she is famous for having undergone, and I feel like that is a piece of her history missing from the film. Even so, as with Hail, Caesar! and Bridge of Spies, during The Danish Girl I was on the lookout online and in our library catalogue for the true story behind the film and came away learning something that I hadn't known about before – and perhaps that's the point.

Comedic operas on this week

The Bremen Town Musicians cast from left, Lara Secord-Haid, the cat; Bradley Christensen, the donkey; Keith Lam, the wolf; Mathieu Abel, the rooster; and Danielle MacMillan, the dog; are welcoming the public to an upcoming Highlands Opera Studio performance written and composed by Canadian Dean Burry. This opera will be sung in English and includes The Brothers Grimm. There will be two 45-minute comedic operas: one on Thursday, Aug. 18 at 7:30 p.m. and the other on Saturday, Aug. 20 at 2 p.m. at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavilion. From the Book of Hockley playing hooky paid off!

Andrew threw away a successful career in Logistics to pursue his dream of reconnecting with the brewing roots of his family. This carried him to the UK's prestigious Brewlab in Sunderland, England, where he procured the alchemy that would drive his signature brewing style.

Moment of clarity: I was sitting in a movie theatre catching a matinee – the first and only time I ever played hooky from work. I was in Operations Management at the time and could not, for the life of me, see myself in the same environment for the next 30 years I submitted my resignation the next day and applied to the Brew School in England. I've been following the path ever since.

He took what he could from there and ventured to Scotland, Cornwall, and ultimately to Krefeld, Germany to pick up near where his mother's family brewery had been, working in the same brewery that had belonged to his ancestors. He came home to Canada for Hockley.

You could call it dumb, but we call it destiny.

Margison competes on world stage

By Angela Long

When packing for Europe, don't forget your ball gown. Opera singer Lauren Margison always packs hers "just in case" she says while on break from Highlands Opera Studio. You never know when you might become a finalist in an international singing competition at one of Europe's most prestigious opera houses – the Nuremberg State Theatre – and asked to perform two arias.

On July 26, Margison was chosen as one of 12 finalists in the inaugural Meistersinger von Nürnberg singing competition launched this year in Germany.

The contest was open to singers of any nationality between the ages of 18 and 35 in the general category, and up to 45 in the German-themed category. Organizers received hundreds of recordings from singers all over the world, inviting a fraction of the applicants to audition in Paris, Hamburg, Moscow, Stockholm, Nuremberg and Toronto. Margison made the list, auditioning with nearly 40 other singers in Toronto at the end of April.

At the age of 24, Margison was one of the youngest of 88 singers to finally walk through the doors of Nuremberg State Theatre on July 23. After the preliminaries and semifinals, Margison was the youngest to make it to the finals.

In an interview with a representative of the German press, the competition's jury president, Prof. Siegfried Jerusalem, says opera singers require a "certain maturity" to sing well.

"You don't achieve maturity through singing lessons at high school, it evolves from singing on stage," he says.

Margison, it seems, is an exception. As the daughter of famed opera tenor Richard Margison and stage director and violinist Valerie Kuinka, and founders of Haliburton's Highlands Opera Studio, Margison attributes her voice's maturity to her "unique experience growing up."

"I've been going to see opera since I was in the womb," she says.

From the six arias selected by Margison, the jury chose two for her to perform in her black satin ball gown.

Now Margison was standing in a "quintessentially European opera house" with "gorgeous gold filigree" glittering and the Nuremberg Philharmonic Orchestra warming up behind her. "It was scary," she says, but also exhilarating.

She sang Puccini, Mozart. It was the moment she knew she'd received the "stamp of approval" from one of the most illustrious juries in the world of opera.

She knew her days of making sandwiches for students of the Highlands Opera Studio were finally over. This month, she will sing her "first actual lead of all time," she says, as Marguerite in HOS's production of Faust. "I guess I've come up in the world," she laughs.

Lunch break is almost over and Margison will return to St.George's Anglican Church to practice a love duet. It's not the Nuremberg State Theatre, but she would rather be here than anywhere else.

A cottager of the Haliburton Highlands her entire life, she says, "I love big cities, but this is where my heart calls out to."

Margison sings her heart out at the Northern Lights Performing Arts Pavillion on Wednesday, Aug. 31 and Thursday Sept. 1 for Faust. For tickets and more information: www.highlandsoperastudio.com.

Minden cat sanctuary needs your help

"If you love it enough, anything will talk to you..." George Washington Carver

I think of these words often now when I volunteer each week at the Minden Cat Sanctuary. After four times there, some of the 18 feral cats are beginning to come closer, or at least to stay in the room while I am there. A few still hiss at me, but from a closer proximity. Their hissing makes me smile and talk to them more.

They are beautiful cats, every one, and of many varieties, colours and sizes. Most are young. They all received spaying and shots when they were able to be caught in downtown Minden. Volunteering at the Sanctuary is meant to socialize them so that they can be directly adopted from there. The pet stores of Minden and Haliburton have helped to find homes for some of the kittens as well.

Some people adopt them straight from the sanctuary, learning a protocol for socializing from Don, the owner of the farm and the man who renovated an old building on his property for the Minden Cat Angels Sanctuary. He cares for them with great knowledge and tenderness, but is also most grateful for any kind of volunteer help, as he is working many other projects on the land. There are now 18 cats. One of the things that Don is proud to say is that these feral cats have never fought since he gave them this home.

Over a dozen of the 30-plus cats rescued over the last two years from the brutal winter conditions in downtown Minden are now happily settled in forever homes. Paulmac's and Haliburton Feed Co. have help to find homes for some of the kittens. To continue rescuing cats, it is urgent that we adopt more out from the shelter. Don, the owner of the large park-like property very close to Minden, has renovated one of the old buildings for the cat sanctuary. He cares for them – along with a few other volunteers – with tenderness and past experience. The cats all have free access to both inside and outside areas.

Don is grateful for any extra help right now as he is working on many other projects on the land. One of the things that he is proud to say is that the cats are all happy, he's watched them learn to trust and play again, and none of them have ever fought or sprayed.

But talking to them and being present is not all there is to volunteering at the cat sanctuary. Cleaning litter boxes and distributing plates of wet and dry food as well as filling water dishes and sweeping floors is needed and basic to caring for these beautiful cats, who – with great dignity – track every movement of humans in their space, mostly from the high shelves built around the inside of the rooms. It is when the cleaning and tidying is done – and I love the sense of making the space clean for them – that I can settle to read aloud inside one of the cages, so they can get used to a human voice.

Usually they disappear as soon as I go in; then I sit and read, and slowly I look up and they have all come out onto their high shelves and are looking down as if listening, or even relaxing with their eyes closed. Story time for cats!

If you are at all cat-inclined, or perhaps just want a new animal-caring experience that will help many cats find a home, and you can help in any way or support these beautiful cat companions, contact Brenda Peddigrew: brenda@soulwinds.ca or call Don directly at 705-457-6923.

Asking for help can make the difference with finances

Thinking Money

Elizabeth O'Connor

When should you be looking for help with your investments?

They say money cannot buy happiness. But this I know: not having control over finances can certainly cause misery. When you are unsure and feel lost, ask for help!

Everyone will need help with financial issues at some point in their life, either occasionally or on a continuous basis.

While it would be nice to be able to handle all of life's financial ups and downs without help, for most of us that is not practical.

A personal story:

I began my own work career the way most people do, as a magician's assistant.

This was quickly followed by a career in the drug industry as a cashier at a pharmacy and then I took on the travel industry as a "consultant" sending you wherever you told me you wanted to go. This inauspicious start led me to my first need for financial help.

My lack of financial savvy hit me hard and early as it does most of us. Are we ever as lost as when we first start out beset by foreign concepts like paying rent, car loans, student loans, parent loans, and friend loans?

And just when you think you are not going to make it, a beginner's credit card application pays off and unseen benefactors hand you the last thing you needed, right in time: more credit.

A few short months after that I found myself seeking help with my finances. I felt like I couldn't breathe and I was convinced I was destined for a life of constant debt and servitude.

Fortunately I met an angel, the assistant manager at the local branch of my bank. He let me know my problems were quite common and all we needed was a plan.

That meeting turned my financial situation around and has stood me well my entire life.

They say money cannot buy happiness. But this I know: not having control over finances can certainly cause misery.

However, the more important lesson I took away from that meeting is when you are unsure and feel lost, ask for help!

Major life events when you may need financial advice:

Many people are able to work through most of their financial issues.

Of course when we are looking at major life events most of us will seek expert guidance if it is available.

For almost all of us the single largest financial expenditure we will ever make is the purchase of a home. Few would venture down that road without consulting a variety of professionals from real estate agents to accountants, lawyers and mortgage specialists.

When and if you should seek advice from an investment or financial professional is a question many of us struggle with.

Probably the two main deciding factors would be the complexity of your financial situation and your level of financial expertise.

Other major life events one should consider seeking financial help for might include retirement or an unexpected windfall such as an inheritance or the sale of a major asset.

Remember the lesson I learned, if you are unsure and feel lost ask for help!

The real estate market is hot, hot, hot:

There are a few interesting trends underway in cottage country. Many young retirees are cashing out of the Toronto and southern Ontario housing market and retiring up here in paradise and many slightly older retirees are selling their cottages to move into town.

New home and condo developments are quickly becoming part of the landscape.

These trends are expected to accelerate rapidly as the people driving them are the tip of the boomer generation. These are examples of major life events that people seek financial guidance on.

Next time I will tell you what you should look for in an investment advisor.

Good financial health to all.

Early Stages introduces young people to improv
Just putting the final touches on the wedding cake during a team-building improv game called Atoms. Fourteen students participated in a month-long program called Early Stages – an initiative of director Scot Denton to inspire Haliburton County youth aged 10 to 14 to explore their creativity through theatre. The course was facilitated by Denton and two of the Highlands Summer Festival's professional actors/vocalists – Oliver! stars Beth Robertson (Nancy) and James Frantowski (Bill Sykes). Garden judges coming to Minden Hills

The Township of Minden Hills is participating in the 2016 Ontario edition of Communities in Bloom.

The Communities in Bloom judges, Mona Boyd from Barrie, and Grace Dekker from Lambton Shores, will evaluate the Township of Minden Hills on Aug. 22 to 24. The community would like to remind all businesses and residents to tidy up their property before the judges arrive.

Communities in Bloom is a Canadian non-profit organization committed to fostering civic pride, environmental responsibility, beautification and to improving quality of life through community participation and a national challenge.

The provincial results will be announced in Stratford, Ont., during the awards ceremonies on Sept. 17.

To support the educational aspect of its activities, the organization established the Communities in Bloom Foundation, a registered charity dedicated to funding, developing, and disseminating education and awareness on the value, improvement, importance and sustainable development of green spaces and natural environment in Canada.

Within the context of climate change and environmental concerns, all those involved in the Communities in Bloom program can be proud of their efforts which provide real and meaningful environmental solutions and benefit all of society.

Jack Gorin Memorial Golf Tournament another fun day out

Great weather and a good turnout made it an exciting Aug. 6 for two hole-in-one contests: one for a trip for two to Las Vegas, sponsored by PIB Insurance, and the other for $10,000 sponsored by Brad Park of Haliburton Foodland. Although there were some close calls, unfortunately no lucky winners again this year.

The Legion would like to thank Gary Thorpe, tournament organizer, and all of our sponsors. /Submitted

Chair yoga on the air

Did you happen to catch my new show, Chair Yoga, airing Monday mornings at 6 a.m. on Canoe at sunrise? I did.

I caught the magic as the mist rose above the hills on the lake, as the loon called, as the sun painted the sky with strokes of pink and violet.

I caught the magic as I sat outside on the cottage deck on a highback chair with no arms, aligning my spine and breathing in this gentle, compassionate 30-minute practice receiving the benefits that yoga has given me for over 15 years.

I caught the magic made possible for me by the openness and receptivity of Canoe FM. If you get the urge, give it a try. I'd like to pass these gifts on to you. I welcome your feedback.

Listeners can contact me, Barb Rosen, at barb_ba47@hotmail.com

Compassionate Yoga (mat or chair) meditation and writing flow is beginning again at Blue Sky Yoga Studio (next to the chiropractic clinic) Sundays, at 10 a.m. to noon, by donation: Sept. 11, Oct.9, Nov. 13. Everyone is welcome.

Teeing up for the Trust
